bourne, requesting Capt. McCrea to come to his immediate assistance. In had an hour 130 men of her Majesty's artiliery had ianded, and, marching in perfect order and silence up two different streets, closed around the Consulate, and separated the crowd from it. In an instant the savage yells that had previously precominated gave way to doubt, fear and won-ter. In less than an hour the Ministers of the new government baving been informed of the landing of the English troops, gallopped down from the palace in rull uniform, escorted by troops; when, on questioning the officer in command of the British troops, and receiving his explanations, the Minister replied, that under the extraordinary circumstances in which the country was placed, he, the British officer, and acted with perfect correctness, and gave him, in the name of the President, his warmest thanks.

gave him, in the name of the President, his warmest thanks.

A conference was at once held in the office of the Consulate, the result of which was that the republic accepted the responsibility of guarding the Consulate, and promised that a large body of troops should be despatched at once, and, further, that a proclamation should be issued, warning the people no longer to surround the house. The Charge d'Affaires of France, therefore, as soon as he was able, dismissed with thanks the English troops, who reembarked in perfect silence and order on board the Molourue, having greatly astonished the population of Port an Prince by the order and discipline observed by them in the ranks when on duty.

The two following nights—by the admirable arrangements made by the French Charge—the Ministers escaped in disguise and reached the Melbourne in safety, which, on the 20th of January, was ordered by the British Consul General to sail for this island, and there to place the refugees under the protection of the British government.

The Emperor is now among us, entitled to the protection of our laws, and to the personal safety which the order and the protection of our laws, and to the personal safety which the order on the promptness with which he appears to have acted throughout the transaction; and there can be no doubt that had be, on being met by the French vessel seeking assistance, hesitated to at once assume the responsibility of the position, the lives and property of the exiled meanch and his family must have been sacrificed.

SAILING OF THE PRIGATE MELBOURNE FROM JAMAICA—SERTOLCHES AT PORT AU PRINCE AND RETURNS TO PORT ROYAL.

[From the Kingston (Jamaica) Standard, Jan. 26.]
The Melbourne left Port Royal some weeks ago with detachments of artillery and of the Forty-first regiment of Foot, amounting in number to between 400 and 500, for England. It appears, however, that a revolution having broken out in Hayl, the European Cossus at Port an Prince, seeing the necessity of seeking some protection for the European population in case the war should be brought into the city, despatched a vessel in search of a man-ofwar, which, by a happy secident, fell in with the Meibourne, then on her way to England. Capt. McDrea, R. A., who was in command of the troops, at once resolved on proceeding to Fort au Prince for the purpose of affording the requisite protection to the subjects of England and incidentally of France, who might be placed in peril of their lives and property by the threatened revolution, and accordingly the course of the Melbourne was at once changed, and she was speedily at anchor in the harbor of Port au Prince.

The Melbourne reached Kingston on Saturday, and the exided party were landed under a strong escort of police that evening. Considerable excitement was manifested among the numerous Haytiens who, having been expatriated on the usurpation of the supreme power by General Soulouque, had ever since residen in this city, and it was feared some attempt would have been made to offer some violence to the ex-Emperof. We are happy, however, to state that the measures adopted for the safety of the exited party have been such as to prevent any attempt to molest their peace or safety.

THE EXCITEMENT SUBSIDING IN KINGSTON—HIS EXAMISESTY TAKES A RESIDENCE.

[From the Kingston (Jamaica) Standard, Jan. 25.]
We are happy to state that the prompt measures adopted by the police authorities have had the effect of queiling the excitement, or at any rate of restraining any public exhibitions of it on the part of the Haytiens, who were the victims of the former revolution, towards the distinguished individual who has sought refuge on our shores. The dense crowds of people who, up to Monday night, througed the neighborhood of Date Tree Hall, in Fast street, seem wholly to have melted away, and there appears to have been nothing yesterday to disturb the tranquility of the imperial party. We learn that the extemperor has either taken, or is on the point of taking, the residence in North street, the property of D. Ramos, Esq., and lately occupied by that gentleman.

PROULAMATION OF PRESIDENT GEFFRARD AFTER SOULOUQUE'S ABDICATION.

The following is a translation of the proclamation issued by General Geffard, the President of Hayti, on the abdication of the empire by General Soulouque.—
HAYINNS—Called by the population of the Artibonite and of the North to put an end to the Impurial government, I left Port au Prince in a cance, placing my faith in that Providence which bestows success. Our cause has triumphed without bloodshed. Such a result is not due to me. God alone has so ordained. As the instrument of Providence I was unwilling that my entry into the capital should give rise to a sanguinary reaction. I sought to conceal all those special wrongs which had given rise to our movement. General Soulouque sent me a deputation requesting protection for his family and person.
To this I assented, because the republic is easentially generous. The deposed chief is in safety. Fellow citizens, I thus respect in him the power that is no more. His act of abdication is about to be made public. I have also covered with my protection the ex-Governor of the capital, when I have caused to be conducted to a foreign Consulate, where he will be protected from all individual vengeance.
Haytiens, let us rest in peace, in union. God will protect us.

The republic has endowed you with a constitution; it shall be observed and executed.

Persons and property shall be respected—agriculture and commerce encouraged.

Live liberty.

Live liberty.
Live equality.
Live the republic.

FABRE GEFFRARD.

SAD STORY.—Some eight years ago a German tailor, with his family, resided in one of the upper wards of our city. A regular attendant of one of the Litheran churches, he was regarded by his neighbors as an homest and upright mao. In an evil hour, prompted, it is said, by the desires of his wife, he opened the house as a beer hall. For some time his business throve finely, and as it grew, so grow his devotion to the vile inquor in which he trafficked—for whisky and every other poisonous compound were, in course of time, vended by him. His house had been at first patronised by persons assuming some respectability, but the character of its frequenters grew worse and worse, until finally, to its otherwise unenviable reputation, was added that of a house of ill fame, and the lowest and vielet outcasts of the city were its constant patrons. The character of the family kept pace with that of the house in its downward progress. The children, bright and intelligent, were hardened in every species of vice. The jail, for many years, was seldom without one or more of the family among its occupants, and thally the father himself died in one of the cells, a victim of dissipation. His son, often incarcerated there, finally left it for the penitentiary to explate the offence of dangerously wounding an officer, who was about to arrest him for stabbing one of his comrades. Bloated, and almost sightless from the effects of dissipation, the mother dragged through another year of two, and on Sanday night last closed her career on earth. The scene which followed is said to have been of the most disgussing description. Some of the most depraved characters who frequented the house, arriving soon after the old woman had drawn her last breath, closed the eyes of the corpsean office that seems to have been of proposed by those in attendance—and adjourning immediately to the barroom, broached one of the barrels of beer, and passed the rest of the night in a drunken orgie. The house, which has long been a pest in the neghborhood, will now p

THE OPERA IN BROOKLYN.

The New Academy of Music-Meeting of the Citizens-The Building to Accommodate Two Thousand Persons-Address of Dr.

A meeting of the citizens and others interested in the rection of an Academy of Music in Brooklyn was held on Monday evening in the Athenseum, Atlantic street. The sence of several members of the committee and the President at Professor Mitchell's lecture, it was nine o'clock before it was organized. Mr. A. L. Lowe presided, and Dr. Hull was appointed Secretary. The chairman, on taking his seat, addressed the meeting in an appropriate speech. He said that he felt honored at being called on to preside on that occasion. He would not detain them by many words on the subject. In the month of October or the 1st of November, a meeting was called to constitute necessity of a public hall in Brooklyn for musical entertainments and objects of a kindred character. At the meeting referred to a committee had been apposed to take the eccessary measures for carring into effect its object; and if he were to form a judgment of, the interest now felt in the undertaking referred to, as compared with that felt at the time he had named, nothing could be more significant or pleasing to the eye than the number of people gathered ingesther on this occasion. The object we best set as the undertaking referred to, as compared with that fek at the time he had named, nothing could be more significant or pleasing to the eye than the number of people gathered together on this occasion. The object contemplated by the committee had been set before them. It was a work which, in their opinion, was destined to effect great good to their city. Believing that the building would be beneficial, and that a necessity for it existed, they had called there, to speak to them, some of the clergymen of the city. Those clergymen would never have appeared themselves, nor called others to do so, had they not themselves felt what they said to be true, and did they not themselves felt what they said to be true, and did they not adhere to their original purpose. (Applause.) They thought that a public hall was needed, and that they should have it paid for in the very beginning, or they did not need it at al. (Applause.) Those cardinal points they adhered to most closely. (Applause.) He meant something which would be for the good of the city—or they meant nothing—to be paid for at the beginning, or not at all. In that connections they alone. closely. (Applause.) He meant something which would be for the good of the city—or they meant nothing—to be paid for at the beginning, or not at all. In that connection he would say to them what had been said to the community days ago, you presented this subject to the community of the community of the presented this subject to the community in a serious light.

On these grounds they appealed to them, and said that there was an obligation resting on every one of them to open a hail. (Applause.) The committee had been endorsers of their orbigations, and were ready to do their part—their full part—appealing to them to do the rest. Two-thirds of the projected work had already been done, and the other third was expected to be that evening. (Applause.) With these remarks he would commit the subject to their hands. (Applause.)

Mr. Chittenen, chair and of the committee, then submitted the report. He said that in the first instance the committee had decided upon the name to be given to the building, and that was sufficiently before them. In the next they had passed the following resolution:—"That no plan shall be recommended by the committee the expenses of which shall exceed the amount of stock subscribed." It would be seen that that resolution was a barrier to the ordinary course of procedure in building institutions of the character of that proposed; not a member of the committee was disposed to recode from that resolution, and under no circumstances could they recommend the stoppion of any plan for an Academy of Music in Brooklyn until the entire amount of money required for the undertaking was subscribed. The next thing was the location of the institution, and they had unanimously decided that it should be erected in the vicinity of the City Hall. They were not authorized to ado on account of the resolution which they had passed, but they knew of several sites either of which would be regarded as eligible for the purpose. The next point was the character of the building, and they had made careful inquiry with respect to the various edifices in this country and in others, and they concluded that it was necessary and expection to provide an eligible h

Singular and Atrocrous Villainy.—The dwelling of Henry Stowell, of Shutesbury, Mass., says the Springfield Republican, was entered on Monday night, Jan. 31, by some desperate, revergedly villain, who stealthily proceeded to a bedrom in which Mr. Stowell's daughter Eilen—a young lady of 19 years—and another young lady were sleeping, in separate beds, and administered to both sofficient chloroform to render them utterly helpiess and unconscious. He then, says the Amherst Express, made several cuts with some sharp instrument upon the forestead of Miss Ellen, extending from the roots of the hair to the eyebrows, and also upon her chin. From these wounds the blood flowed freely, but they are not serious. He also made a gash of some three inches in length upon her breast, and probably committed other outrages. On retiring she had taken the rings from her inchest, and probably committed other outrages. On retiring she had taken the rings from her finers and placed them upon the foor, broken and useless. Her clothing, of all kindle, as well as whatever eige belonged to her, including even her papers, which the villain obtained by breaking open her trunk, were carefully selected in the room where she slept, and also in adjoining rooms, and carried away. As other articles, many of them of value, belonging to other members of the family, were left undisturbed, it is obvious that personal revenage upon Miss Stowell was the object of the wicked deprediator. Miss Stowell was the object of the wicked deprediator. Miss Stowell was the object of the wicked deprediator. Miss Stowell was the object of the wicked deprediator in the following morning, and found her face and bed ciothing covered with blood, and herself suffering greatly from her wounds. The family were at once accused and diligent bedilowered as an anisoling of the actual person of her mility one. The victim of this inhuman outrage is an intelligent young Indignation Meeting of Colored Men.—The colored men of New Boifford held a meeting on Saturday evening, 12th inst., to protest against the claims of the African Colonization and Civilization Society, as advocated by Rev. Dr. J. B. Smith. The Mercury says that the hall was crowded with both males and females, and that the meeting was one of deep interest to the colored people. A number of speeches were made and resolutions adopted, expressing hostility to any scheme which involves the removal of their best citizens to Africa or any foreign country. While they denounce the Colonization Society as the unreleuting foe of the colored people of the country, they express sympathy with the infant republic of Liberia in her noble struggle to elevate herself to an honorable and distinguished nationality.
